SCHOOL REPORT.

Ten schools of twenty-six weeks each, have been supported for the year. In a few instances, pupils at a distance from school, have been assisted in attendance.

Ethel M. Stevens, Lena C. Philbrook, taught at Calef Hill; Millie F. Wilson, at the Square; Myrtie A. Hill, at Hunkins; Mary N. Redding, Louise Emery, Irena S. Kelley, at the Meadow; Olive E. Sanborn, Grace E. Leavitt, Bay; Mary A. Emerson, Morrison; Lena C. Philbrook, Mabel L. A. Goodell, Gaza; Ida M. Dearborn, Chapel; Emma A. Lane, Osgood; E. Blanche Hersey, North Sanbornton.

Teachers brought to their work good, natural and acquired ability, and were industrious and faithful. They were generally successful. In every school, there were classes which made good progress; in most of them, it was true of all the classes.

Good government in schools is conceded as essential to success. Essential, not alone to the successful pursuit of study, but to the development of good citizenship. Peterman in his Elements of Civil Government, says: "The teacher has the same power and right to govern the school that the parent has to govern the family. The law puts the teacher in the parent's place and expects him to perform the parent's office, subject to the action of the directors or trustees. It clothes him with all power necessary to govern the school, and then holds him responsible for its conduct, the directors having the right to dismiss him at any time for a failure to perform his duty. The teacher is one of our most important officers. The state has confided to him the trust of teaching, of showing boys and girls how to be useful men and women, of training them for citizenship.

This is a great work to do. The state has clothed him with ample power for the purpose, and it is his duty to serve the state faithfully and well. The teacher should govern kindly and firmly. Every pupil in school, of whatever age and size, owes him cheerful and ready obedience. It is his duty, the duty for which he is paid, to insist upon this obedience; to govern the school; to teach the pupils to obey while they are children, in order that they may rule well when they become rulers; that is, when they become citizens."

The teacher's task, in this regard, is greatly lightened if he has the sympathy and support of parents. As the home is more easily governed when the surrounding influences are favorable, so, too, the school. Every school should have in its environment a public sentiment which supports good government which commends obedience and makes disobedience odious. If pupils pass through the school and do not learn to obey, what can we expect of them, later on, as citizens of the state? Statistics of crime show that those who are behind prison bars are there for disloyalty.
